MISSION STATEMENT

The mission of the Kodiak Historical Society is to collect, preserve, research and exhibit historically significant artifacts, documents, photographs, and other data relative to the Kodiak and Aleutian Islands area; and to evaluate and interpret the materials in the collection for educational purposes and presentation to the public through the operation of the Baranov Museum.

Director's Message

Connected. Proud. Inspired. These are the words chosen by museum visitors and supporters to describe how an ideal visit to the Baranov Museum would make them feel. These words capture what we aspire to provide for every visitor to the museum, and they will continue to guide our work as a community history museum.

In the pages of this report you will find news and stories of Kodiak Historical Society activities throughout the last fiscal year (July 1, 2011 to June 30, 2012). I am immensely proud of our small staff and what we have been able to accomplish in the past year. Last September I was accompanying a donor on a tour of the building, discussing a charitable donation he intended to make and how we would put his gift to good use. Don Corwin was at work on the front porch putting the finishing touches on a storm window he had built for a window unit, Marie Acemah was leading an after-school activity for youngsters in the main room, Alice Ryser was working with a volunteer to identify individuals in photographs from the Kodiak Daily Mirror collection, and Anjuli Grantham was preparing newly acquired artwork by Alf Pryor to travel to Anchorage for display in the offices of the Rasmuson Foundation. The donor asked me good-naturedly if I had planned his visit to coincide with such a busy day and I replied, honestly and with pride, "This is our everyday." Members and friends: I hope you, too, are proud of our work to preserve and share Kodiak history.

In the year ahead we will continue to plan the design and development of new permanent exhibits for the museum gallery. We invite you to be a part of this process by participating in a focus group meeting, attending a community presentation or simply giving us a call to share your thoughts. We made a conscious choice to pursue design work in an unhurried and thoughtful year-long process to incorporate community input – please participate!

Finally, I would like to express how grateful I am to have been a part of the Kodiak Historical Society team for the past ten years. I am confident that the Society will continue to evolve in a positive way under new leadership, building on a long-standing reputation for excellence in collections care, educational programs and historic preservation. I look forward to taking a new role as proud member and donor to the museum, and as a visitor who leaves the building feeling connected and inspired.

Sincerely,
Katie Oliver

This word cloud was created with responses to the question, "What do you enjoy about the Baranov Museum?" from our recent exhibit design survey. The size of the word indicates the frequency it appears in response to the question in the 100+ surveys completed.

Before Dr. A. Holmes Johnson and his registered nurse wife, Fostina, arrived in Kodiak in 1938, injured and sick individuals depended on home remedies or took a boat to Seward to receive treatment. Dr. Johnson became the medical director of the Griffin Memorial Hospital in 1940. In 1944, he opened a private practice in Kodiak. With this doctor's bag, he performed medical housecalls throughout the community, delivering babies, stitching cuts, performing operations and checking on ill patients.

Collections

The core asset of the Kodiak Historical Society is our collections. From these collections, the Baranov Museum derives identity, strength and, ultimately, purpose.

Anjuli Grantham is Curator of Collections for the Baranov Museum.

In 1959, upon hearing of the sudden death of Ben Kraft, the Kodiak Mirror wrote, "The names Kodiak and Kraft are synonymous; one is not complete without the other." While this small notebook is not a glamorous museum object, the Kodiak Historical Society is dedicated to documenting and preserving the history of Kodiak businesses. Few would dispute that Kraft's was a central Kodiak institution, as it was in existence from 1903 until 1994. The Society is interested in growing its collection of local business memorabilia, so please keep your eyes open for objects that convey the history of local enterprise.

Archives

The Kodiak Historical Society archives contain a vast collection of materials chronicling the history of the Kodiak and Aleutian Islands region.

Archivist Alice Ryser manages the collection of archival materials, including rare books, newspapers, oral histories, manuscripts, photographs, film and maps. She cares for an outstanding collection of approximately 30,000 historic images. Glass slides, negatives and prints portray the people of southwest Alaska at work, at home, at sea and at leisure.

ACQUISITION HIGHLIGHTS:

Eighty black and white original photographs taken on the Kodiak Naval Base during WWII by Lewis Sundquist. In this collection are many photos of WWII planes. Gift of Joyce Sundquist Lotze.

One hundred sixty five digital photographs and video taken in June 15, 2011 of the 70th anniversary of Base Kodiak and Centennial of Naval Aviation, by Charly Hengen and Jonathan Lally. Gift of U.S.C.G. personnel.

Twenty eight original photographs taken at Afognak Village and Port Hobron by Jesse Wingfeld. Jesse and his wife taught school at Afognak in the 1930s. Gift of J.C. and Carolyn Wingfeld.

Fourty four digital photographs of bear guides, Bill Pinnell and Morris Talifson at Olga Bay. Gift of Al Seale.
